

1 CORINTHIANS 1:4-9 (NLT) I always thank my God for you and for the gracious gifts he has given you, now that you belong to Christ Jesus. ⁵Through him, God has enriched your church in every way—with all of your eloquent words and all of your knowledge. ⁶This confirms that what I told you about Christ is true. ⁷Now you have every spiritual gift you | need as you eagerly wait for the return of our Lord Jesus Christ. ⁸He will keep you strong to the end so that you will be free from all blame on the day when our Lord Jesus Christ returns. ⁹God will do this, for he is faithful to do what he says, and he has invited you into partnership with his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

This year's presidential election campaign has become very bizarre, regardless of which party one examines. It also gives us a "case-in-point" to apply the "Seven Principles of Biblical Unity". You'll find five of those principles listed on an insert in the bulletin.

Principle 1: The Priority of Unity ~ It is the Secret of God's Will ~ EPHESIANS 1:9-10 (NRSV)

Regardless of who is right or who is wrong; or who is perceived to be right or wrong—in the Presidential race, in the family, in the church or in any other relationship—no issue is more important than the unity of Christ's body! Jesus said, "No city or house divided against itself will stand" (MATTHEW 12:25 NRSV).

Principle 2: The Tools of Unity: Words that Build Up and Give Grace ~ EPHESIANS 4:29 (NRSV)

Regardless of who is right or wrong, or who is perceived to be right or wrong, our words with one another must be—ABSOLUTELY MUST BE—chosen to build up, rather than tear down, and to give grace, rather than to win an argument. Win/lose resolutions always divide; never build up. Remember the first principle: nothing is more important than the unity of Christ's body.

Principle 3: The Foundation of Unity: Love ~ I CORINTHIANS 13:4-7 (NRSV)

Surely this one is self-explanatory. Some things simply cannot be done or said in love. But, for emphasis, "Love does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful or boastful or proud." Love speaks with a different tone of voice.

Principle 4: The Model of Unity: The Mind of Christ ~ PHILIPPIANS 2:3-5 (NRSV)

"...in humility regard others as better than yourselves..." Now, there is a loving, edifying way to debate and resolve conflict. But if we are to have the mind of Christ—if we are to approach every issue in humility, the first consideration always must be, "What if I'm wrong?"

I understand that some people just can't comprehend that concept. In the overwhelming majority of times when I confront someone with the question, "What if you're wrong?" the response is, "But I'm not." Without the humility to consider—honestly—the possibility that he or she may be wrong, no person can participate effectively in the satisfactory resolution of any conflict.

And so, today we come to:

Principle 5: The Strategy of Unity: A Ministry Partnership

I CORINTHIANS 1:8-9 (NLT) (God) will keep you strong to the end, ...for he is faithful to do what he says, and he has invited you into partnership with his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

Now, I'm walking a thin line when I choose the New Living Translation; but four other English translations also render the verse, "...he has invited you into partnership with his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord." In the original language the word is koinonia, which usually is translated, "fellowship." Most English version (a total of 42) say, "...he has invited you into fellowship with his Son..."

The word literally means, "common"—as in common property. It is the basis of English words, like "community" and "communion." The Amplified New Testament uses two words: "companionship and participation;" while the Easy to Read Version says, "(God) has chosen you to share life with His Son..."

I think the word, "partnership", captures all of the above.

The other word that grabs my attention is "invited"; "...he has invited you into partnership... In the original language. It is the same word used in...

- Galatians 5:13: "...you were called into liberty..."
- Ephesians 4:1: "I ... urge you to live a life worthy of your calling."
- Colossians 3:15: "And may the peace of Christ reign in your hearts, because it is for this that you were called together as parts of one body."

And in its noun form, "ἐκκλησία," meaning "those who are called," it most often is translated, "church." It is totally within Scriptural integrity to say that we have been called into partnership with Christ, and that that constitutes a valid definition of "church."

Again, like humility from last week, this is a "hard sell" in a consumerist culture whose mantra is "the customer is always right." The world defines "membership" as "paying your dues and getting your benefits." The New Testament defines membership in the Church as "being called into partnership with Christ."

From the greatest figures in the history of Israel and the church, to the most anonymous person on the back pew of some tiny congregation in the remotest part of Appalachia, all God's servants have their roles defined by God's calling.

The calling of God is unique for each person. Some are dramatic: Peter Marshall, Saul of Tarsus, convicted Watergate felon, Chuck Colson. We can get so distracted by the wide-screen, Technicolor, wrap-around sound stories of God's call that we completely miss the "still small voice" God uses to call most of us.

The prophets, Jeremiah and Isaiah, and St. Paul (among others) say God called them "from their mothers' wombs." In a sense God's call is imbedded in our DNA—not so much an "event" as it is part of our identity as beings created in the image of God. It's a kind of "Calling by Self-Discovery"; and some of us just kinda' "grow into it" by paying attention to the things we love to do, the things that bring us a sense of fulfillment and the things that other people affirm in us.

But, some of us are less self-aware, so it takes something a bit more theatrical to get our attention. If you're like me, it may take a 2X4 upside the head; and some folks go through life blissfully oblivious to their calling. But all of us are called. Every life has divine meaning and purpose, and those who discover it rarely demonstrate symptoms of depression or aimlessness or emptiness.

So, the ways God calls his servants may vary greatly, but the call is never to a merely private faith or piety. Isaiah's call was not simply to restore Israel, but to extend God's salvation to the "all peoples of the earth." In the opening lines of the Corinthian letter, when Paul says "you are called," the "you" is plural—it's "y'all are called!" It is not enough for us to cherish only a private faith. Oh, there is a private dimension to our faith and to our calling; but our fellowship with one another and our witness to the world, if faithful, will reflect the partnership with Christ into which God has called us collectively.

Partnership. Here's the IRS definition: "the relationship existing between two or more persons who join to carry on a trade or business. Each person contributes money, property, labor or skill, and expects to share in the profits and losses of the business."

And Wikipedia defines it as "an arrangement in which parties agree to cooperate to advance their mutual interests."

But I find no better definition of the partnership into which we are called than this beautiful summation in EPHESIANS 4:15-16: "...speaking the truth in love, we must grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ, ¹⁶from whom the whole body, joined and knit together by every ligament with which it is equipped, as each part is working properly, promotes the body's growth in building itself up in love."

Let's consider one more New Testament image of partnership: the church is the bride of Christ. The traditional marriage vow is a promise is to love and to cherish... "in good times and in bad, in sickness and in health, for better or for worse." Remaining faithful only as long as we agree with each other does not fit any definition of partnership—or unity. The good news is that our partnership is not dependent upon any of us being right, nor upon any of being in agreement on any specific issue. "God will keep us strong to the end, for he is faithful to do what he says, and he has called us into partnership with his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord."
